

SCANNING

We produce top-quality scans from your 35mm films and slides (any subject, not just aeroplanes) using Nikon film scanners. Your images are individually scanned (we do not use batch feeders which could damage your precious films) using Digital Ice to remove dust and scratches from the scan where possible.

The resulting scan is then manually adjusted to give you the best possible image. Your scans are then written to CD-R or DVD-R and returned to you, together with your original film, by Royal Mail Special Delivery. For more information please see the FAQ section at www.flyingpix.co.uk. You can also contact Mike by telephone on 07831 114885.

HOW DO I PREPARE MY SLIDES FOR SCANNING?

1. Clean your slides and films very carefully using a very soft brush and compressed air from a large blower bulb which you can obtain from any photographic store. The edge of film on mounted slides is a great place for dirt and dust to collect. When your films arrive we will clean them again, using the same methods, before we scan them.
2. Mounted slides should be in mounts between 1 and 3.2mm thick. Please do not send slides that are mounted in mounts with glass unless you have spoken to me first. Do not send slides in projector magazines! Pack your slides in plastic slide boxes if possible and pack these in a cardboard box with plenty of packing.
3. Unmounted film should be sent in strips of no more than 6 frames per strip. If you only require specific frames in a strip scanning, please remember to indicate the frame numbers. Unmounted film should be sent in individual negative storage bags or in the pages from storage binders. These should be packed between very thick card, bubble wrapped and placed in a box or large padded bag.
4. Complete and sign the order form.
5. You should send your images by Royal Mail Special Delivery. Please weigh your package and add the postage rates shown on the order form. If your films are worth more than the replacement cost of the film should they be lost or damaged in transit, you should also ask at the Post Office for Consequential Loss Insurance in addition to the Royal Mail Special Delivery.

By completing the order form, you confirm that you hold the copyright of the images or have written permission (enclosed with your order) for the copyright holder to have the images scanned by FlyingPix.co.uk

Liability

It is impossible for the Company to assess the value of original film or photographs supplied by the customer and the charges made for our services do not reflect or incorporate unlimited liability. Customers should insure work of special value and advise us accordingly. All orders for scanning are accepted on the basis that their value does not exceed the cost of equivalent new unprocessed material. In the unlikely event of loss or damage, whether caused by negligence or otherwise, liability is limited to the cost of an equivalent amount of unexposed film. Furthermore, Flyingpix.co.uk will not be liable in any circumstances for consequential loss, special damages or other indirect loss, however caused.
